• MANAGEMENT OF THE VARIOUS TYPES OF DEGRADABLE AND NON-DEGRADABLE WASTE

- ✓ RED DUSTBINS: It is used for non-biodegradable waste. Because these wastes cannot be recycled, it is also regarded as rejecting dustbin. It is typically used in hospitals to collect biomedical waste, which includes needles, surgical knives, body fluids, cotton dressings, pop casts, tissues, sanitary napkins, and other items that must be disposed of carefully.
- ✓ GREEN DUSTBINS: It is used to dispose of wet and biodegradable waste. It is also known as an organic bin because it contains waste from the kitchen, plants, and animals. Rotten eggs, fruits, vegetables and peels, coconut shells, tea bags, used tea powder, leftover food, garden waste, and so on are examples of these wastes. Organic waste is also used in the kitchen garden as manure to grow vegetables. Some of these wastes are sterilized and fed to animals, while farmers use the remainder for manure and composting, which improves soil fertility. Composting converts this waste to zero waste.
- ✓ BLUE DUSTBINS: It is used for non-biodegradable and dry waste. Plastic, aluminum cans, polystyrene, newspapers, paints, aerosol cans, lights, broken bulbs, glass bottles, plastic bottles, gift wrappers, cards, cardboards, thermal coal, tetra pack packaging, and other materials should be discarded in this bin.

Vermicompost:

- Vermicomposting is a natural process in which earthworms convert rigid waste materials into compost. The compost created by this environmentally friendly process has long been used as a natural fertilizer to boost plant growth.
- Dry garbage from the campus was collected and transferred to the composting tray, where it was converted into compost by earthworms.
